

Personalising models

Medical problems often have large inter-individual differences, for example: epileptic seizures.

Datasets are often limited in size. However, it can be feasible to collect a small amount of data from each person.

Meta-learning aims to be able to learn new concepts quickly when it has already learnt related tasks.

